This online course challenges participants to bring their artful experience leading others at any level of the organization and combine it with behavioral science theories, improving the participant's ability to enhance their people's motivation, satisfaction, and performance.

This course is not intended to be theoretical; it is designed to be deliberately applied in the real world with people using contemporary challenges that need creative solutions. The foundation of the course is about understanding human behavior, including your own, and learning to lead people more effectively in a dynamic environment.

60 hrs.
Online
Self-Paced

Originally designed by General Howard Prince and the Behavioral Sciences and Leadership Department staff at the United States Military Academy at West Point, this course has been redesigned by General Prince, Dr. Mitch Javidi, Dr. Dave Mather, and the faculty at the National Command and Staff College. “Authentic & Deliberate Leadership: The West Point Way” is now offered in multiple versions to meet agency and/or personnel needs.

COMPASSION

The course is instructed by Dr. Dave Mather with more than 35 years of public safety leadership expertise. He has worked with more than 350 agencies around the world as an executive coach, leadership instructor, keynote speaker, and international consultant supporting public safety and the communities they serve. Since leaving uniform, Dave served as the Executive Director for RULETC (Rural Law Enforcement Technology Center), a U.S. Department of Justice project that provided technology research, testing, evaluation, and support to law enforcement agencies across the United States. "When approaching online leadership training, two questions immediately come to mind. First, is there anything here I can't get somewhere else, preferably in person? Second, can the content be delivered in an engaging and accountable way? The Authentic and Deliberate Leadership course delivers a yes, to both. Having read just about every common resource on leadership, and attending many available courses, I can say there's a lot in the course I've never seen before. More importantly, the delivery is not only inspiring but the interface holds you accountable to attentive completion. In the end, this course is a high-value proposition."
